Police Believe Dead Man Was Or- Laboring People, Take Advantage of Small Premlum and Redeposit Their Cash--George Gould Talks of Foreign Situation.

New York, Nov. 5.—A rain-soaked policeman bound for the Mamburg avenue station in Williamsburg early yesterday morning stumbled on the body of a man in a vacant lot on Noil street, between Centre and Evergreen ayenues. He turned it over and found that blood was flowing from nine stab wounds. On the off chance that there might be a little life left, be turned in an ambuince call, but when Dr. Slaughter, of the German hospital, arrived he declared that the man was stone dead. The body, however, was still warm, and the doctor said that there had been life in it less than an hour before.

About the first thing that came to light after the body had been taken to the Hamburg avenue station was an iron bomb with a fuse four feet long attached to it. The bomb had been securely buttoned under the man's waistcoat and the fuse had been securely buttoned under the man's waistcoat and the fuse had been securely buttoned under the man's waistcoat and the fuse had been securely buttoned under the man's waistcoat and the fuse had been securely buttoned under the man's waistcoat and the fuse had been securely buttoned under the man's waistcoat and the fuse had been securely buttoned under the man's waistcoat and the fuse had been securely buttoned under the man's waistcoat and the fuse had been securely buttoned under the man's waistcoat and the fuse had been securely buttoned under the man's waistcoat and the fuse had been securely buttoned under the man's waistcoat and the fuse had been securely buttoned under the man's waistcoat and the fuse had been securely buttoned under the man's back and cheet, had trickled down over the fuse and put it out.
